Cable franchise talks heat up

By John McWhorter
The Journal

ALBANY — Officials from Century Cable asked the City Council Monday night not to require that the company establish a security fund, but the council was in no mood to negotiate. "I don't think you're real regular with the people in this city," Councilmember Robert Nichols told company officials. "You're saying to me 'trust me' and ... I find it hard to trust."

Nichols' comments were the latest in a sometimes bitter franchise renewal process that began months ago between the city and Century Cable.

The security fund in dispute would be drawn upon by the city if it feels Century Cable has violated its franchise agreement.

Carl Pilnick, the city's cable TV consultant, said the security fund will allow the city to enforce the franchise agreement without going to court.

"The city needs some practical way to enforce the agreement," Pilnick said.

Bill Rosendahl, Century Cable's vice president of corporate affairs, argued that a cash fund should instead be replaced by a performance bond.

A performance bond requires that legal steps be taken before it can be drawn upon.

That prospect was rejected by Nichols who said it would not make sense for the city to file suit

Developer sues E.C. for $1.14 million

Small staff report

EL CERRITO — Schurgin Development Cos. last week slapped the El Cerrito Redevelopment Agency with a $1.14 million lawsuit after the city dropped the developer from a proposed shopping mall project.

The Los Angeles-based company filed suit in Contra Costa County Superior Court April 6 alleging that the city violated its 15-year-old contract.

The City Council, sitting as the Redevelopment Agency, voted in February to drop Schurgin after it failed to meet deadlines, including two for submitting a master plan with "firm commitment" from a lender.

Development plans called for a 20 million open-air shopping mall on 12 acres in the heart of the city's shopping district on San Pablo Avenue.

Schurgin's lawsuit alleges in part that the city breached its contract when it fired the company for not getting a "firm commitment" from a lender. Schurgin maintains that under the agreement a "firm commitment" was not required as part of the financing plan.

The suit also says Schurgin submitted the plan before the deadline, but the city "unreasonably withheld approval."

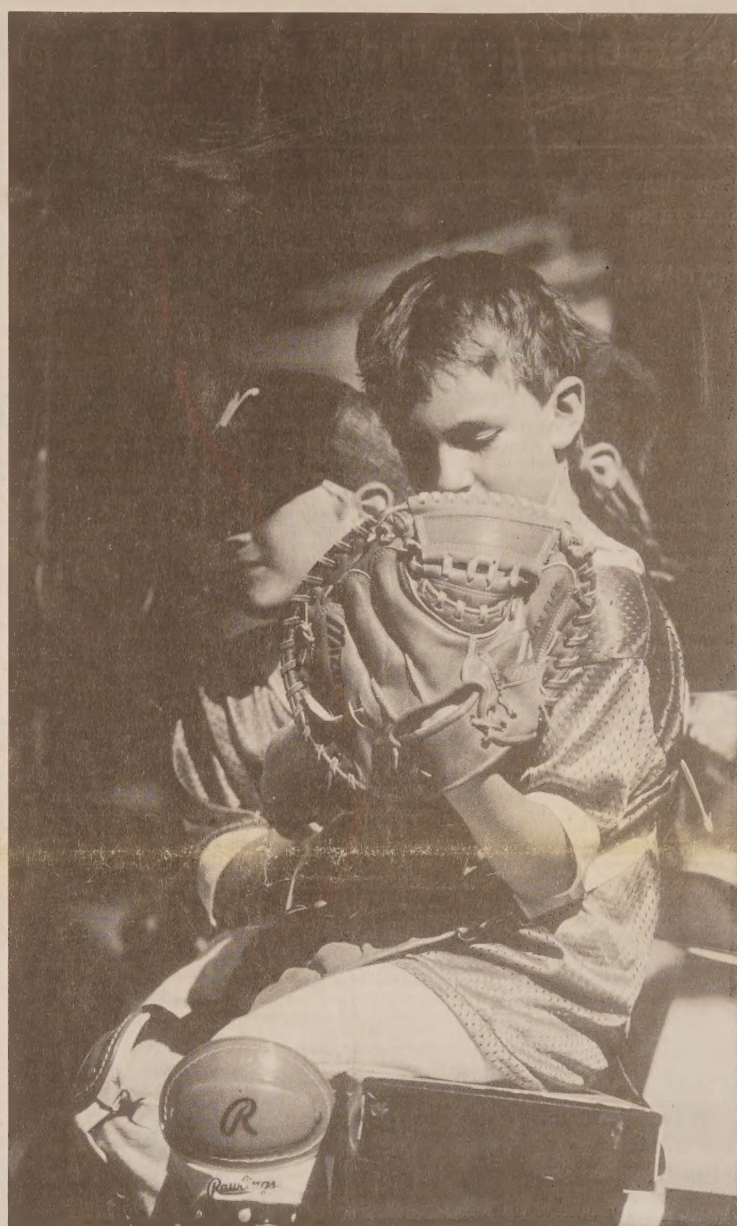

Patrick O'Keefe, Redevelopment Agency director, dismissed Schurgin's charges.

"They had four extensions. We felt that they had been given plenty of time," he said.

Schurgin fell out of favor with the city after it "made a number of promises to the council and then didn't come through on the promises," said O'Keefe.

According to the lawsuit, Schurgin spent at least $1.14 million on planning, preparing leases, negotiating with potential tenants and "analyzing" the property.

Mayor Jean Siri would not comment on specifics of the suit, but she said she is not surprised by the legal action. "We expected it. They (Schurgin representatives) were always very arrogant."

Wildcats player Robert Warwick marched off a parade on Solano Avenue and onto the playing field Saturday. See Little League highlights on page 6.

Board tackles classroom overcrowding

By Ben Hellwarth
The Journal

ALBANY — The school board heard a preliminary report Tuesday night chock-full of analyses and suggestions on how the district can get the most out of its available classroom space, especially in the face of sharp increases in elementary school enrollment.

The 34-page report came from the school board's Facilities Study Committee, set up in November to take a detailed look at student enrollment trends, future property needs and funding sources.

The committee, composed of 23 administrators, teachers and community members and divided into four sub-committees, is scheduled to issue final recommendations Dec. 1.

The most pressing issue before committee members is how to deal with the anticipated shortfall of four kindergarten classrooms in September.

According to a demographic study done for the district by the San Francisco firm of Gruen Gruen & Associates, 1,136 children are currently enrolled in elementary grades. That number is expected to increase by 70 students to 1,206 next year and to almost 1,300 students by the 1992-93 school year.

With that in mind, the Program Review Sub-Committee recommended expanding elementary level activities to the current site of the continuation high school at the MacGregor campus on San Gabriel Avenue.

That scenario would have MacGregor house two kindergarten and two first grade classes during the 1989-90 school year, and then add two second grade classes the following year.

The sub-committee's report said MacGregor students would continue to occupy two rooms in the first year and then could be moved to a new location in the second year.

The sub-committee also suggested that "opportunities for fruitful collaboration," such as tutoring programs, would be possible between continuation high school students and elementary students.

Gary Amado, the principal of Marin Elementary School who chairs the program sub-committee, said the district should be careful not just to seek extra classroom space, but to set up a "quality school program on the level of other Albany programs."

Once the MacGregor elementary classes were in place, Amado's committee said teachers at the site "should be allowed the widest possible latitude for experimenting with new ideas and models for grouping and educating children."

The Asset Inventory Sub-Committee, which studied current uses of the 12 properties owned by the school district, agreed that MacGregor School "is the only viable space available" for additional classrooms.

That sub-committee recommended that the continuation high school stay at the MacGregor site, and that adult education classes run at the school be moved.

To help fund the district's growing classroom needs, the Funding Sources Sub-Committee recommended in part that the school district generate income through developer fees on new housing construction and through a district-operated child care program.

To avoid a "catastrophic" financial impact, the district must also work to have the city's special schools' tax renewed, said funding committee Chair Virginia

An attorney's terrifying abduction

El Cerrito woman recounts her experience in El Salvador

By Krista Wood

Special to The Journal

A typical El Salvadoran death squad scene: An unmarked car pulls up in the middle of the night. Heavily-armed men in civilian dress escort their captors into the vehicle.

"And this is how people are 'disappeared,'" said Joanne Morrison, an El Cerrito attorney who found herself in such a situation last January.

Morrison and 10 other Americans were abducted by the military police while traveling through the Morazan province, a hot spot of civil war strife.

The area with its bombed-out villages is controlled by the anti-government forces of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front.

Dressed in regulation combat fatigues and driving a white Cherokee Jeep, Major Sena, a member of the Liberation Front, stopped the group as it was leaving the region after a five-day stay.

Speaking in Spanish with a distinctive American chicano accent he told the group they were traveling without the necessary

"safe conduct pass."

He arranged for them to go to the military base at San Francisco Gotera to "sign some papers." Morrison said the Major also spoke fluent English "with a strong Texas accent."

The government "doesn't want internationals to go in there and see the devastation," she explained. "They don't want us to talk to the people and learn what is going on there."

Morrison's group was held for two nights and two days; interrogated repeatedly; refused food, water and phone calls and threatened with beatings and torture.

"There was constant fear and apprehension," she said. But her own fear was moderated, she said, by the bravery she saw in the El Salvadoran people.

"You see members of your own family tortured, raped and murdered (but you) rebuild your life there no matter what the government does."

Morrison lives with her two cats in a modest home near the El Cerrito BART station. The petite 43-year-old is eager to talk about her experience and her continued activism.

Facts about war-torn El Salvador spill out of her: More than 60,000 civilians have died over the last eight years in a country the size of Massachusetts; many died at the hands of the powerful Treasury Police, a guard that seeks out anti-government guerrillas.

Morrison met a villager who told her a church in the Morazan region was bombed by government helicopters during a religious celebration. The rockets

It's a beautiful day in the neighborhood

GARAGE SALES, long a focal point of suburban social life, are no longer as simple as throwing your surplus belongings on the lawn and stapling pieces of cardboard with your address written on it on the corner phone poles.

Albany, for example, has an ordinance requiring the purchase of a $2 permit from City Hall before a sale can be held. Residents are limited to two sales a year, the city clerk's office tells us, and putting signs up on poles, posts or streets is prohibited. Signs in cars are OK. Before the event is held, would-be garage merchants also must take an inventory list of items for sale to the city treasurer's office. The permit is good for a two-day sale and expires 15 days after purchase.

While El Cerrito does not have an ordinance, the word from the city administrative offices is that there is an "unwritten policy" setting a limit of two sales a year. Sales on a regular basis are "not permitted" a spokeswoman said, and large multi-family sales are also discouraged. Sales held regularly, or ones that include retail merchandise would require licensing as a business, she said. Not that the unwritten policy keeps any of the above from happening, of course.

First-time offenders in Albany charged with an illegal garage sale rap should probably try and plea bargain....

EXTINCTION FOR THE HOMELESS? That's the suggestion made in an ad from the January issue of Campaigns and Elections. "Help the Homeless and Hungry become extinct with Corporate, Foundation or Association sponsorship" urges an ad announcing "A national culinary celebration" in Washington, D.C., for the Presidential inaugural weekend. (Let them eat cake until they gag?)

We agree with John C. Dunn, the El Cerrito attorney who forwarded this to us, that the ad is "quite revealing." Dunn adds, "But then they probably meant well." We can only hope so.

FOOD WITH AN ATTITUDE: How else can we explain Happy Steak on San Pablo Avenue in El Cerrito and Happy Produce on Solano Avenue in Albany? Perhaps the two should merge to delight diners with a merry and balanced meal. Or are they reflective of different eating habits in the two cities?

WORK IS PROCEEDING at the site of the old Albany Hospital, which is slated to become the city's new library and community center. The East Bay Conservation Corps has been weeding, mowing and cleaning up the grounds around the building.

The single family house at the Masonic Avenue corner of the site is being earmarked as the new quarters for the city's Department of Recreation and Community Services. The move should relieve at least some of the congestion around and in City Hall. Now if only the department could do something about the parts of the BART linear park that appear to be returning to the natural state.

BELEATED CONGRATULATIONS to Albany City Councilmember Bill Lewis, who became the proud grandfather of a 9½ pound girl March 10....

THE FOAM FOOD CONTAINER BAN proposed by El Cerrito Mayor Jean Siri earlier this year is on hold for now, pending a report due out in late April from Contra Costa County, which is also considering some sort of restriction.

"We don't have enough staff to keep writing reports," Siri said. "This way (a ban) will be something we can all do at the same time." Siri concedes that ozone depletion is not really an issue with foam containers. "The issue is litter," she insists. "It makes up an excess amount of the garbage."

THE PROPOSED BAY TRAIL, which backers hope will eventually include a network of some 400 miles of continuous trails circling the bay, is moving slowly through the planning process. In the meantime, bicycle tour maps of existing portions of the trail are available from the Association of Bay Area Governments, P.O. Box 2050, Oakland, 94604. The trail plan envisions including the Albany shoreline in the eventual network. It may someday become a legitimate alternative to the Eastshore Freeway.

ABAG is putting together a mailing list to notify the public of upcoming meetings and is seeking volunteers to help with letter writing and fund raising. To get on the mailing list call ABAG's 24-hour trail information line at 464-7975.

EL CERRITO'S NEW city manager will be guest of honor at a special wine and cheese reception April 19 from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at the Open House Senior Center, 6500 Stockton Ave. Here's your chance to meet, greet and ask the tough questions of Gary Pokorny, who took over the position on April 10. And also to see the council's taste in wine and cheese.

Daniel Givens, who has been interim city manager the past six months, will go back to the more mundane post of chief of police.

ALSO ON THE CALENDAR: Don't forget, drought fans, National Garden week ends Saturday. If your lawn hasn't already turned from yellow to brown, this is a perfect excuse to sneak out and give it a semi-annual watering.

SPRING CLEANUP DAY in El Cerrito is less than a month away (May 6 for some areas, May 8 to 12 for others. Consult your city brochure for the exact day the trucks will come by.)

THE 75TH RUNNING of the California Derby is April 22 at Golden Gate Fields. Trivia buffs might be interested to know that Bing Crosby was on the original board of directors of the Golden Gate Turf Club, the name of the facility when it opened in 1939.

According to an article written that year, the total capacity of the racetrack was 100,000 (people, not horses). Imagine what a sell-out crowd of that size would do to traffic on the Eastshore today.

Letters

Santa Fe Realty newsletter a 'self serving

The Journal received a copy of the following letter sent to Santa Fe Pacific Realty Corp.

Once again I am in receipt of your self-serving propaganda rag, "Albany by the Bay."

You say on Page 1: "Santa Fe Pacific will not extend the lease of Golden Gate Fields beyond 2002 because it believes the site is underutilized from an economic point of view...." You could save space and add clarity by just saying, "We see a chance to make a lot of money."

You go on to say, "...development will transform the waterfront into a great public amenity for use by all of Albany's residents." That statement is pure bull---. Development as proposed by Santa Fe would turn the waterfront into a congested nightmare which would be avoided by most of Albany's residents.

On the last page you ask "Who is doing something about traffic?" Certainly not Santa Fe Pacific Realty, advocates of a development plan that would have thousands of people traveling to Albany every day on a car, on already overcrowded freeways.

Your "news" is a sham. proposed development is disgusting. Your attempt to deceive the citizens of Albany into believing your rip-off Albany waterfront will benefit them is insulting.

Something wrong in El Cerrito

Editor:

At an El Cerrito City Council meeting last summer, El Cerrito City Attorney William Bullard advised the council that they could not legally exempt senior citizens receiving Social Security Supplemental Income payments (SSI) from El Cerrito's new assessment district because this would be a prohibited gift of public funds, and so no exemption was made.

Now the city will provide up to $150,000 to help the new manager buy a home in El Cerrito. Some of those dollars will have been collected from senior citizens on SSI, by way of the special assessment district.

When widows and widowers on SSI, many of whom live in apartments, are taxed so the city manager can buy a home something is wrong with El Cerrito.

A browser at Frank Morley's Book Store was accidentally locked out April 6 when the owner closed the shop without noticing her. The police could not reach the owner and the landlord had the wrong key. A locksmith eventually gained entry and the customer was set free.

A caller reported April 4 that an elderly man walking on Curtis Avenue appeared to be lost. When contacted, the man told police he was having difficulty keeping his pants up. Officers helped him refasten his belt and offered him a ride, which he refused.

Police removed a Berkeley man from the Albany Fire Department April 4. The man had wandered in the station and spent some time entertaining them with "his theories on evolution," but firemen eventually lost interest and called police.

A baseball player from St. Mary's High School was injured during practice April 4. He slid into second base and was hit in the eye by a low throw from a pivot man. He was taken to Alta Bates Hospital.

A man with no known address was found comatose in the bushes on Curtis Avenue near Safeway April 4. Emergency medical technicians said he was suffering from a variety of medical symptoms. He was taken to the hospital.

A Curtis Avenue man reported hearing a loud television coming from his neighbor's house. The neighbor, who is hard of hearing, turned the volume down when police arrived.

A Solano Avenue woman reported April 3 that the smoke from her cooking set off the smoke alarm in her apartment. She reset the alarm and opened the door for ventilation. This set off the smoke alarm in the hallway which set off the fire alarm throughout the building.

Arco Mini Mart reported that a man tried to put a large amount of frozen yogurt in a small cone at a self-serve machine. In the process, he spilled $2 worth of yogurt, according to the manager. The man offered all he had on him — $1.75. The manager took the money and told him not to return.

PG&E rep gives fascinating talk

Our March speaker, Tapan Munroe, chief economist for PG&E, gave an interesting talk on our economic outlook for 1989. Munroe said our prosperity and quality of life, to a large extent, are due to the quality of the state's and region's educational system.

California's system of higher education has been outstanding, one of the best in the world. We do an excellent job of training our top 50 percent, while the Japanese do a great job of training their bottom 50 percent.

Our K-12 system, until the 1970s, had a reputation for excellence and was a model for the nation. Today's workers between the ages of 30 and 65, are the backbone of our economy: they were well-trained and well-educated in the system.

Munroe's concern about the future is can we sustain a high-tech economy into the 21st century with the current products of our K-12 system, and his answer, sadly, is no! Our K-12 system is not meeting the needs of the region's high-tech economy.

A recent study indicates that 25 percent of students cannot locate the Pacific Ocean or the United States on an unlabeled world map. This is the first time in our history that a younger generation will actually know less than their parents.

A recent study indicated that on an unlabeled map, out of 280 teachers, 60 percent could not find England and 90 percent could not find Vietnam.

DOMINO'S PIZZA held its grand Opening April 1 at the new Montclair-Thornhill location with pizza, clowns, and a time message.

You may have seen Zippo the

"I am a local owner and am very interested in returning something more than good will to my community," commented Kennett, as we walked up to Thornhill School. "My involvement and my employees' involvement is a way to help young people hear this very important message."

At the school things really got rolling in more ways than one. To those of us in the know. It was also obvious how young and impressionable children are facing a new world every day and learning a lot more than just the ABC's and math.

Zippo's juggling was flawless — well, almost flawless. Actually some of the kids in the front rows had to give him some help, which opened up a great deal of clown-kid interaction.

The message was given with wit, humor and little bit of seriousness which seemed to go over Behm. Funds from the tax could free up money from the district's general fund that could then go toward accommodating extra students.

In other business, the board: • Unanimously approved a 7 percent pay raise for Superintendent J. Dale Hudson, effective retroactively to July 1 of last year. The district's top administrator, who was hired in 1985, will now earn $72,118 per year, an increase of $5,048 over his current $67,070 annual pay.

Board President Kay Rabin said Hudson's new salary still leaves him lower-paid than he would be in many other districts.

• Unanimously appointed Nancy Bowen, a kindergarten teacher at Cornell School, as 1989 Summer School Principal.

• Accepted the resignation of Albany High School teacher Gail Winslow, effective at the end of the current school year.

• Discussed criteria for the upcoming selection of an appointed board member to fill the seat of Bonnie Cediel, who resigned in February. The application deadline for the vacancy is 4 p.m. tomorrow, April 14.

• Accepted an estimated $18,050 worth of computer equipment from three private donations.

and pay legal fees in order to recover funds from the bond.

Rosendahl said he is sure the company and the city would be able to successfully negotiate through any differences and that the security fund would be unnecessary.

"We at Century Cable are committed to bringing service" to the people of Albany, he said. He promised that if a franchise agreement is approved, Century would begin installing "state-of-the-art" cable equipment which would allow the system to expand to more than 50 channels.

The city has received a number of complaints from customers who say the cable's reception is poor and there are too few channels.

If approved at its second reading, the ordinance will establish guidelines from which a cable franchise agreement can be negotiated.

Both parties must agree to all components in the franchise agreement. According to City Administrator Steven Salomon, if Century does not agree to the security fund arrangement, he will advise the council to reject the agreement.

The size of the security fund has not yet been determined, but Councilmember Nichols said he would like it to be as high as $100,000.

Along with electronic gadgets and motorcycles, the United States now imports from Japan a new way of learning music.

Called the Yamaha Education System, the method seems to be revolutionizing music education, replacing the dreaded piano lesson and the ruler on the knuckles with what some professional music teachers perceive as comparable to the fictional Professor Harold Hill's famous Think System.

Local exponent of the method is Ronna Honigman, director of the Yamaha Music School in Richmond near Albany Hill. "We teach children from ages 3 to 9 that music is not a drudge or just another boring lesson," she said. "We try to give them an enthusiasm for music that will last all of their lives."

"The method is based in the fact that the eye precedes the ear in learning. We begin with the aural, or listening, skills and then go on to fundamental musicianship and some theory in the advanced classes."

"We believe that everyone has an innate musical ability. We use accepted psychological principles to develop that ability to whatever level the student is comfortable with. We try to make music fun," she said.

Dismissing the time-worn image of the child forced to practice alone while the other kids are out on the sand lot playing baseball, children at the school learn together in one-hour weekly classes of up to 12 students. Classes are divided by age, 3-year-olds, 4 to 6, 7 to 9 and 9 to adult. Tuition for six months is $240.

Each with his or her own Yamaha electronic keyboard, 3-year-olds, along with a parent or adult friend whose attendance is required, are introduced to basic musical concepts by singing, playing along with the teacher and keeping time on rhythm instruments in the class called The Music in Me.

Rather than learning to read music the old-fashioned way, the 3's, who have not yet learned to read anything, sing notes solfege — not c, d, e, but do, re, mi.

Georgia Fujikawa is pleased with what her children, Kelly, 8½, and Matthew, 5½, both students at the Marin Elementary School, have accomplished at the school. "Kelly took a summer class to try it out and she's now in her third year," she said. "Matthew just assumed he would go, too. They both love it. As a non-musician I've learned a lot myself."

Kelly plans to begin flute in the fourth grade when she becomes eligible for the Marin music program. "I don't think they'll become professional musicians," Fujikawa said. "I hope they will go on through school."

An adjunct to Yamaha International, the music education system is rapidly overcoming its initial reputation as merely a summer promotional scheme. The program was introduced to the U.S. in 1964, accepted by the method has been resisted by a Western establishment rooted in European tradition.

Piano Quarterly, the teacher's bible, conducted a investigation of the Yamaha Education System in 1984 and found fault. Rock and pop musicians have made the DX-7 synthesizer their instrument of choice and concert pianists, most notably Andor, are beginning to turn to Bosendorfers, Bechsteins, Baldwins for Yamaha scoring export points for yet another field.

The music education of Yamaha now claims students taught by teachers in 35 countries around the world. In the United States, Yamaha schools in the San Francisco Bay Area have a total enrollment of 1,000 students. The students give an annual recital for parents and friends.

to be the major hurdle between the city and the company, other issues have also arisen.

The ordinance also requires that within two years, the company must establish a business office near Albany to serve city customers.

Currently, customers must go to the company's office in San Pablo if they want to save the $15 conversion charge for service changes.

"Frankly we don't think you have the right to tell us where to put our business," Rosendahl told council members. He added that his company would be willing to negotiate over that requirement.

The city tempered an original provision that would have required the company to answer 90 percent of its calls within minutes. Instead, the city Century may use an answering machine to pick up calls with rings and take three minutes before the caller is transferred to an operator.

The suggestion was met with disapproval by Century.

"It's not that I'm saying unreasonable," Rosendahl said. "We answer most calls in three rings. We just don't put that in the ordinance anyone any good."

Calls made to Century on day were answered within rings.

were so powerful that they knocked the people from the pews to the altar.

Music and propaganda

Once Morrison's group was loaded into El Salvadoran militia vehicles, they were driven to the San Francisco Gotera military compound. The Americans were told to sign some papers and were forced to spend the night outside under a gazebo surrounded by a half-dozen government guards.

Most of the detainees were in their 20s. They had come to El Salvador to get a first-hand account of the country's political situation. Many visitors were sponsored by a network of Central American relief organizations which included the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador, Morrison's group, and Students Against Intervention in Central America.

The following day, the Americans heard music filling the air of the Plaza de San Francisco Gotera. It was interspersed with booming condemnations of the Farabundo guerrillas. They were informed that they would be turned over to the Treasury Police, notorious for the death squads.

Morrison recalls that at that moment her "blood ran cold." The group was denied phone calls, but their captors promised that the American Embassy would be informed of their detention.

Lee Alterman, an aide to Rep.

Ronald Dellums (D-Oakland), said there are military people who have the attitude: "Kill them all and then sort out the bodies." He said it is "obviously dangerous," but that people like Morrison should be commended. Dellums had written the letter of introduction for the group's trip to the war-torn country.

Classic "death squad"

The Treasury Police arrived late that night, well-armed and in civilian dress. In indistinguishable open-bed trucks, the Americans were driven to San Salvador.

"At this point I was the most frightened because this was the classic death squad situation," Morrison said.

Once in San Salvador, the Americans spent a sleepless night of interrogation and harassment. They vowed to keep together, despite threats of beatings, because to split up would make the group vulnerable. The light in their military cell was kept on all night. Guards came in periodically and questioned them about their political lives. One said he would beat the Americans with a club if they did not cooperate.

Some members of the group managed to destroy film of travel pictures taken in the Morazan region. They feared the pictures would endanger the villagers and Farabundo guerrillas they'd met.

They survived the long night in terror, but managed to escape severe beatings. Their translator, however, was "roughed up" when guards questioned her about her family and their political leanings, said Morrison. "The military is very put off by left-wing Americans mucking around in their affairs," said Dellums' aide Alterman. "We find the whole situation (regarding the group's abduction) horrible."

The next morning the detainees met with Vice-Consul Raymond Dillon, an American Embassy official who appeared to be disinterested in the group's predicament.

He told them he was aware that they had been abducted but that he was too busy to take action earlier, Morrison said. On his advice, the Americans signed a statement swearing that the police had treated them fairly. The group split into two vans and headed toward the airport.

The embassy official's attitude changed, however, when a government guard shot a bullet through the side of their companions' van.

First abduction of its kind

According to local Central American activist groups, this was the first abduction of a large group of visiting Americans. Four American Maryknoll nuns were raped and murdered in 1981 and two American labor union officials were killed six years ago.

Morrison talks of her experience with conviction more than with fear. "For me it crystallized my views on the situation," she said. "The U.S. will be found with the choice of sending in troops or getting out of there."

Working Together

By Helen Tinsley

My brother wants our parents to get back together

For three years our parents have been divorced. My older sister, who's 15, and I (I'm 12), can remember the terrible fights that our parents had. But our little brother is only 5 and can't remember.

Our parents have joint custody and we switch every week. Recently our father told us he was remarrying. I like our stepmother-to-be and so does my sister. But our brother has suddenly decided that he hates her and that our parents should get back together.

I guess this is a very delayed reaction since our brother was too young to understand when our parents got divorced. Our parents get along fine now and our brother thinks we could all be happy if they got back together. We've tried to make him like Dad's girlfriend and tried to tell him how terrible it was before our parents split, but he won't listen. Now what?

Actually your brother is behaving quite normally. Many children (even kids your age) have a "reunification fantasy" for months and years after their parents are divorced and even after their parents have married other people. Even some parents have the fantasy that the family could reunite.

It is often human nature that we remember the things that are pleasurable and ignore the things that are painful. In other words, parents and kids might disregard, sometimes forget, how painful it was when the family was together — parents fighting constantly, mom crying, dad stomping out of the house, kids frightened.

Children and parents might disregard or downplay these situations, choosing to remember all the fun family times. I have worked with a lot of young children whose parents have divorced. Almost without exception when I ask them what they would wish for if they had a magic wand they say "that my parents would get back together."

My guess is that as your brother gets older and gets to know and like his new stepmother, this fantasy will get dimmer. For now, when your brother talks about his "reunification fantasy," just listen; everybody likes to be listened to.

You might try repeating back to him in your own words what you heard him say. Ask him why he feels that way. Trying to convince him he's wrong probably won't work. Being patient, listening carefully and mentioning this to your parents (and new stepmother) will probably help. Your brother is lucky to have you as his sister.

I am 7. I am told there will be a fight after school on Monday. Should I tell or will that put me in a bad place?

Who will be in this fight? From your letter it doesn't sound as if it will be you. Just in case it is, though, I would wonder if you're scared or worried about this fight. If you are, talking to your parent or some other adult you trust might help.

I would say that no matter whether it's you or anyone else who's fighting, if you feel a dangerous situation exists (for example, several teenagers gangling up on one younger child or someone using a weapon) then it's important to tell someone. If there isn't this kind of danger, I think it's OK not to tell.

I am 24 and am in command of my life in most ways. I have a good job with important responsibilities and am in good health. I live with my parents and sister. The household is full of tension; my parents don't get along; my father and sister argue incessantly.

I find myself mediating all their fights and hating it. I know my family, especially my mother, counts on me emotionally and financially. Recently, I have been feeling really depressed. I'm not seeing my friends and feel like there's no way out.

First, let me say that if you are feeling very trapped and may be even having some suicidal thoughts, it is very important that you deal with these feelings right away.

Depending on the immediacy of your feelings, setting up an appointment with a therapist or calling a crisis line (in the front section of the telephone white pages under Community Service Numbers) are two alternatives. Finding a therapist is best done by asking friends for recommendations. Checking the yellow page listings labeled Social Workers; Marriage, Family and Child Counselors; and Psychologists also can be helpful.

Next, let's look at your feelings. My guess is that you are a responsible person who feels like the glue and the rubber band in the family. In other words, you keep the family together by stopping the fights and by caring for everyone's feelings. That's the glue part.

However, acting like the referee makes you feel like everyone is pulling and tugging at you, leaving you feeling overextended. The rubber band.

It's no wonder you're feeling depressed. You have an impossible job! On top of that, the energy you need to have other interests is greatly diminished.

At your stage of life, your "life tasks" include pursuing friendships and love relationships and living on your own. I think your depression may be sending you a very important message: you are not taking care of some of your own essential needs.

Think about how you might be able to help your family without sacrificing your own needs. You know, by overprotecting your family, you may be keeping them from changing and growing on their own.

Cougars score stunning victory against Piedmont

Mike Kostainsek's home runs helped keep Albany undefeated

By Matt DeMello
Special to The Journal

It was raining baseballs outside of Albany's Memorial Park on Monday.

The Albany High Cougars crashed six home runs, including three by Mike Kostainsek, en route to a 15-2 thrashing of league opponent Piedmont. The win was Albany's fifth straight without a loss in East Shore Athletic League play.

Pitcher Ian Atkinson went the distance for his second league win, allowing just three hits. Both Piedmont runs were unearned, coming after one of Albany's two errors.

But Atkinson's strong outing was overshadowed by the power display put on by the Cougars. They cleared the fences in the first, twice in the third on back-to-back blasts, twice more in the fourth and once in the fifth inning. Piedmont went deep once.

The six home runs were most likely an Albany record. Kostainsek's hat trick certainly was. The log reads:

- First inning, two men on, a blast to left field, about 330 feet from home plate.
- Fourth inning, one man on, straightaway center, about 340 feet.

• Fifth inning, two men on, a towering shot to right-center field, about 360 feet.

Kostainsek, who began the game with two homers and 10 RBIs, also batted in the third inning. His bid for a fourth home run fell some 10 feet short of the left field fence. The junior catcher wound up with a double.

That's a total of 14 bases, eight runs batted in and four runs scored. That's a month for some players.

"I just felt good up there," said Kostainsek after the game. "I got the pitches I needed — just meatballs. I wanted to hit the ball hard."

The scary thing was, he wasn't alone. Eight different Cougars accounted for Albany's 15 hits, and all starters reached base at least once.

Right fielder Rito Castanon-Hill ripped two singles and a home run to center field, scoring three times. Designated hitter Fields Nelson socked a three-run blast to center, and second baseman Jason Tuttle smacked a solo homer to right center and a run scoring double.

Eric Flenoid and Bob Medearis scored two runs each.

Junior pitcher Atkinson didn't need most of the run support his team provided. He retired the first nine men he faced before an error and two sacrifice runs accounted for a run in the fourth.

The next batter was Richie Watts, who lined an Atkinson offering well over the 30-foot tall fence in right for Piedmont's first hit of the game.

Atkinson allowed two more hits, a double in the fifth and a single in the sixth. He walked two and struck out eight, including five in a row during one stretch.

The performance lowered his league ERA to under two runs a game.

Piedmont coach Mike Humphries was slightly shell-shocked by the Cougars attack.

"They're terrific. I've never seen a power display like that before," he said. "And I've never seen one guy hit three home runs before."

El Cerrito varsity, JV staying on top

By Don August
The Journal

EL CERRITO — The El Cerrito Gauchos' baseball program, top ranked at the varsity level, flexed its muscle at the junior varsity level as well, leaving both teams at the top of their respective league races.

But first, the varsity Gauchos tasted their first bit of league defeat last week as they travelled to De La Salle and came away 5-3 losers.

With the Concord heat sweltering in the 90s, the El Cerrito unbeaten league record also wilted as the Spartans used a five-run fifth inning to beat the Gauchos and their pitcher Todd Jackson.

The Gauchos played long ball to get the lead early. In the second, Wyatt Hurd came to the plate and belted a solo homerun to give El Cerrito a 1-0 lead. That lead was increased to 3-0 in the fifth, when Kurt Hunt belted a two-run shot and, with Jackson sailing along, it looked like that would be enough, but De La Salle had other thoughts.

Four hits in the fifth turned into five De La Salle runs, and quickly El Cerrito found themselves in a hole that they couldn't climb out of. The 5-3 final put El Cerrito's league record at 2-1 as they returned home to play host to Clayton Valley and once again entered the winners' circle 4-1 winners.

Behind the pitching of John Patton and the hitting of Sam Burnstein and Harry Reed, the Gauchos moved their record to 3-1.

Burnstein's two-run double highlighted a three-run third that gave the Gauchos the victory. On the day Burnstein went two for three as did Reed. On the mound, Patton went the distance, striking out five and allowing just one earned run.

Going into this week's play, the Gauchos stood at 11-3 over all and 3-1 in league play. While the varsity team was continuing their winning ways, the junior varsity lost for the first time this year.

Bringing a perfect 12-0 record into play against De La Salle, the Gauchos wouldn't go down quietly as they battled for nine innings before beating De La Salle 7-6, in a thriller.

Trailing into their half of the second inning by a 4-0 score, David Jones got the Gauchos rolling with a triple and scored on an RBI ground ball by Brad Gooding. Trailing 4-1, they drew closer in the fourth when Tony Fant walked, stole second and after Dustin Hengl singled, scored on Jones' double.

Gooding's fielders choice scored Hengl and the lead was cut to 4-3. Then in the fifth, Fant and Hengl again combined to score

Week starts out good with two easy wins for Cougars

By Don August
The Journal

ALBANY — The Albany Cougars varsity baseball squad used good pitching and timely hitting perfectly last week when they defeated two league toughies to keep their spot atop their division in the Eastshore Athletic League.

Opening up the week, the Cougars took on the only other team to match their perfect league beginning, Alameda. Someone had to give on their unbeaten record and the Cougars made sure it wasn't them. They defeated the Hornets 6-1.

The Cougars got off to a quick start on their opponents' field, putting three runs on the board before Alameda could get them out. Back-to-back hits by Eric Flenoid and Rito Castanon-Hill started them off and, following a walk to Mike Kostainsek, Ian Atkinson delivered an RBI single and Josh Alpert followed up with a double that scored two more and the Cougars led 3-0.

They made it 5-0 in the second when again Flenoid and Castanon-Hill got aboard to lead off and they were knocked in by consecutive ground outs by Bobby Medearis and Kostainsek.

Leading 5-1 in the fifth, the Cougars added their final run by putting together a Kostainsek double and an RBI single again by Alpert. The score of 6-1 was the way it ended with Atkinson pitching superbly for six and one-third before getting relief help from Eric Mapes for the final two outs.

The Cougars then brought their 3-0 league record home to take on visiting St. Mary's. They had to come back from a 3-1 deficit to register a 5-3 win. Again, however, the Cougars jumped out ahead in the first inning.

After a one-out walk to Castanon-Hill, Mike Kostainsek brought him home with a triple and the Cougars were out fast leading 1-0. However in the second off Josh Alpert the Panthers took over.

Singles by Willie Jackson, Steve Fillmore set the table. Dylan These who singled to first run and then walked to second. Mike Davis hit a home run to center for a 2-1 lead. Then to Cruz then singled scoring third run before Alpert could Down 3-1, The Albany Cougars got going again in the third. Jim Beeth's sacrifice fly scored Medearis who had singled and gap closed to 3-2. In the fifth, killing blow came. Kostainsek delivered a two-run homer, putting Albany up for good, 4-3.

Jason Tuttle scored the Cougars' last run by singling the sixth, moving to second. Tim Krone's bunt and scoring Eric Flenoid's single to left. It was all Alpert and Mapes on the mound to finish off the Panthers by a count of 5-3.

The win gives the Cougars overall record of 8-3 but more importantly, perfect 4-0 league play and a solid hold on first place in the Shore division.

Albany Little League

Parade kicks off second week

By Don August
The Journal

ALBANY — After a parade ceremony, Albany Little League marched into its second week in style last week, when top pitching performances and long ball hitting made for some unexpected heroes and happy coaches.

In the majors, the Cubs and Dodgers continued their winning ways as they each knocked off two more opponents while the Cubs stayed within striking distance.

The Cubs saw their pitching dominate their foes as they battled hard to raise their record to 3-0. Win No. 1 came the hard way — an extra inning 1-0 win over the Cardinals as Burlin Germany and Edward Preisler combined to limit the Cardinals to two hits.

Aaron Baines' sacrifice fly to left in the bottom of the eighth sent Preisler home with the only run in the game. Preisler struck out 10 batters in his five innings of work while the Cardinals' Tatum Tapscott and Micha Arnon worked well on the mound in the loss.

In their other victory, a 7-2 decision over the Braves was keyed again by Preisler as his fourth inning bases-loaded triple scored three runs. For the Braves, Jason Careadio and Dominic "Peewee" Palazzolo broke up the no-hit bid of Aaron Baines in the final inning.

The Dodgers used a four-run third to break open a tie game with the Giants as they went on to defeat the Giants 12-3. Nate Gathegi had two hits for the winners and the pitching of Danny Gross kept the Giants' batters quiet as he scattered three hits for the win. They then kept even with the Cubs by surviving a seven-inning game with the Pirates which they won 11-4.

Tom Beckwith provided the offensive punch for the Dodgers, belting two long home runs and an RBI double. Defensively, Kyl Fleming made the plays of the game in the bottom of the sixth.

With the Pirates threatening to win with the bases loaded and no outs in a tie ball game, Fleming took a hit away with a leaping catch of a line drive for the first out. One batter later fielded a ground ball up the middle and threw the potential winner out at the plate. The Dodgers then scored seven times in the seventh for the win.

The Giants stayed alive after their loss to the Dodgers with a 7-4 victory over the Cardinals on opening day. Seth Altschuler delivered a two-out single to first in the first inning runs to lead the Giants. Andre Rabb-Patterson and Danny Gipsman also RBI hits to put the game away in the four-run fifth.

So the standings show the Cubs and Dodgers deadlocked at 2-2 with the Giants next at 1-2. The Pirates and Cardinals have yet to win. All this should change next week, when all three divisions play each other.

In the minors, the Twins and Red Sox have jumped quickly to the league lead of the 3rd division.

The Red Sox used ground ching by Peter Maris in victory. See LITTLE LEAGUE on page 7.

Expect a kinder, gentler Giants fan

San Francisco Giants fans will see some changes when they attend ball games at Candlestick this season, including a new rule aimed at giving fans who are in too much alcohol the boot if they misbehave.

Giants spokesman Duffy Jennings said fans should expect a different atmosphere this year at the stadium, long notorious for the fan-fueled boorish behavior of some fans who attend games.

Jennings questioned whether the reputation is deserved. He added, however, that incidents of those that occurred during the Giants' doubleheader last week — when fans showered the team with beer, garbage and profanity — have created a potential image problem for the team.

"It's never as bad as people say it to be," he said. "But we are the incidents that get the media's attention."

To combat the problem, Jennings said all employees at the stadium, including security personnel, ushers and ushers, parking lot attendants and janitors, have taken part in a program aimed at identifying signs of alcohol abuse among fans.

The TEAM or Techniques for Effective Alcohol Management program teaches the employees early recognition of potential problem areas, how to distinguish between different types of behavior and methods of identifying minors who attempt to purchase alcohol, Jennings said.

He urged fans disturbed by the behavior of others to immediately report the situation to any stadium employee. If the behavior is deemed to be unacceptable, retribution will be swift, Jennings promised.

According to Jennings, every security incident recorded during the past two seasons has been entered into a computer. He said the information now makes it possible to identify repeat offenders and deal with them appropriately.

A scale of punishments has been developed to deal with problem fans, he said, ranging from ejection from the stadium to possible fines and criminal prosecution.

He said the San Francisco district attorney's office has vowed to aggressively prosecute those found breaking laws at the stadium.

Like last season, fans will be allowed to purchase only two beers or glasses of wine at any one time, Jennings said. He also said anyone under age 35 can expect to be asked for a piece of identification when purchasing alcohol, and all alcohol sales will end after the seventh inning.

Fans can expect other changes as well, beginning as soon as they enter the parking lot. The team has employed a staff of parking directors who control traffic in the lot adjacent to the stadium.

Personnel will be on hand to direct vehicles into the lot, provide security in parking areas during the game, then direct cars out of the lot following the contest, Jennings said.

A sound system placed at each of the stadium's gates will broadcast information, directions and assistance to arriving fans. Brochures containing a map, the stadium's code of conduct and other pertinent information will be distributed to those passing through the turnstiles.

Once inside the stadium, fans will notice that each restroom comes equipped with an attendant, the spokesman said. He said tables will also be available in each restroom where infants' diapers can be changed.

A "guest relations" center will be operating on the stadium's mezzanine level, Jennings said. Representatives will be on hand for those with security problems and questions. Candlestick's lost-and-found department will also be located there.

Plans call for "guest relations" representatives clad in orange vests to circulate throughout the stadium to provide assistance.

Finally, a "healthy hut" on the main concourse selling sandwiches, salads, yogurt, bottled water and juices will offer fans an alternative to the usual stadium fare, Jennings said.

If all goes according to plan, the effort will create a more welcome atmosphere for fans attending baseball games at Candlestick.

"It won't happen overnight," Jennings said. "But I think people will see a dramatic change right away."

Now if they can only do something about the weather.

over the A's 15-1 and the Angels 15-5. Combined, he pitched six innings of shutout baseball. Defensively, Diego Orellana has been the bright spot. On the offensive side of things, Matt Lam and Noah Hiafar both had bases loaded doubles during the week as the Red Sox flexed their muscles. Cooper Funk has also pitched well for the Sox.

Also 2-0 are the Twins. Ray Cagan's three innings of no-hit ball lifted them over the Angels by a count of 4-1. Against the White Sox, Max Good had two hits, one of which highlighted a four-run inning in the 5-4 victory.

In that game for the White Sox, Edi Gathegi pitched three shutout innings, and Evan Phippen had two hits.

Earlier, the Sox defeated the Tigers 12-10 as Robby Onweller and Sean Hart each scored twice. The Tigers had key hits from Stefan Shakiba, Ben Graber and Paul Vogler.

As for the Athletics, they got key offensive production from Ryan Begley, who had two hits and strong pitching from Ken Beatus. Defensively Corey Riday-White has played exceptionally well in the shortstop position.

El Cerrito

runs with ground balls and after five El Cerrito had a 6-4 lead. After De La Salle tied the score with two runs in the sixth, the two teams went on, deadlocked at six. The game remained that way until the ninth when El Cerrito pitcher Bobby Kahlon ended a long afternoon.

Biante Paysinger walked, stole second, was sacrificed to third and scored when Kahlon knocked him in with a single. For Kahlong, it capped off a great game. He pitched all nine innings in recording the win. It ups his season record to a perfect 5-0 while his earned run average stands at an incredible 1.56.

Trying to run their win streak to 13 was unlucky for the Gauchos. It ended in a controversial 4-3 loss to Clayton Valley.

A second inning RBI single by Khari Dickson and a fourth inning RBI triple by David Jones gave El Cerrito a 2-0 advantage. Clayton Valley chipped away and eventually took a 3-2 lead entering the final inning when El Cerrito came back.

Dickson led off with a walk, was sacrificed to second by Brandon Schnurr. Schnurr reached when the play was botched and two runners were on. Charles Set-les then bunted and again they got no one out. The bases were loaded for Jim Farr's RBI single to tie the score. After a strikeout, the fun began.

Matt Taylor hit a fly to medium deep center. Both runners tagged up and tried to advance. Schnurr raced for the plate as Settles raced for third. As Schnurr was crossing the plate, Settles was thrown out at third on a very close play. In a play that El Cerrito backers believe was blown at third, the umpires ruled that the out occurred before Schnurr crossed the plate, therefore not allowing the score.

From there Clayton Valley punched across the winning run in the bottom of the seventh, breaking the season-long winning streak at 12. Shane Dowling and Fant combined to pitch for the Gauchos allowing 0 earned runs.

The loss left the junior Gauchos 3-1 in league play and 12-1 overall.

So far this season Matt Taylor has led the way offensively, hitting at a .447 clip, scoring 20 runs. David Jones (.400) and Tony Fant (16 RBI's in nine games) have led the way in run production.

Fant, a sophomore, is hitting .375 and has an on-base percentage of .667.

Butler and Cotton top Albany league bowlers

ALBANY — Ralph Butler put together a fine 245-225-215-685 in the 880 Commercial League to head the men's weekly honor at Albany Bowl. Dorothy Cotton fired a 181-201-225-607 in the Ladies Scratch League to lead the women's hit parade.

Scores in the 930 Scratch Classic League were unbelievably low as the leading clubs suffered lopsided defeats. Pacesetter Luau Island Restaurant was blitzed 21-4 by Al Caruso Insurance, while Estes Refrigeration dropped from second to fourth after being trimmed by the same 21-4 margin at the hands of O&R Vending (Chuck Elder 215-602).

In order matches Matt Rei's 235-646 helped Nakaso Landscaping move up to third via a 15-10 victory over A&L Bowling Supply; Willis Construction (Ralph Willis 223-617) climbed to fourth by downing A.C.A. 16-9; and Dean Asami Pro Shop got back into contention by blasting Kent's Travel and Tour 21-4.

Current standings with just three weeks remaining in the final third: Luau Island 129, Nakaso 124½, Willis Construction 123, O&R Vending 101½, A.C.A.

96½, Kent's Travel and Tour 87½.

Other leading distaff series in addition to Dorothy Cotton's big effort were Claudia Bayless 207-583, Jennie Rinaldi 205-560, Joan Brewer 200-559, Velma Walton 235-553, Darlene Dixon 208-547, Wanda Cunningham 202-544, Sandra Elder 204-542, Asta Dingman 540 and Delcia Young 202-540. Sergio Specia's 220-636 and Alan Markham's 226-604 topped the junior keggers.

Free Careers in Education day set for April 22

Free Careers in Education will be held Saturday, April 22, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Los Angeles College, Pittsburg. The day is sponsored by the Contra Costa County Office of Education and local school districts in the county.

"We're anticipating more than 100 openings for teachers and other certificated positions in the county next fall," said County Superintendent of Schools L. Stewart.

"This is the fourth educational fair that we have held in the county," he added. "Nearly 1,000 people attended the fair last year, so apparently there's great interest in such an event. We think it also provides a service to school districts that have positions to be filled."

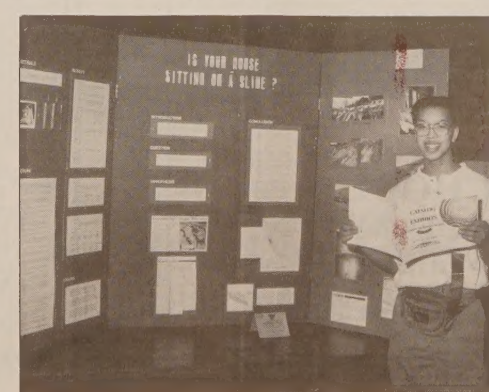

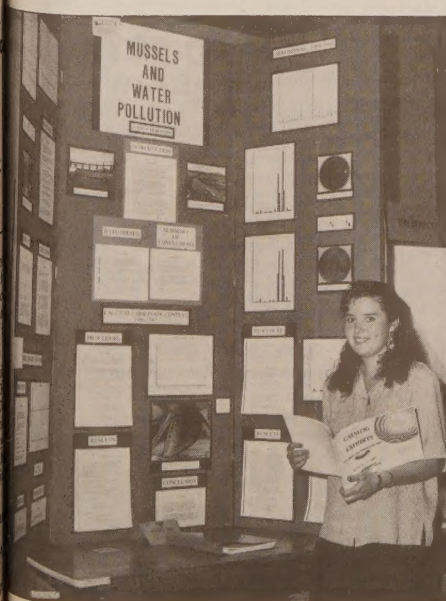

Employment representatives from school districts in the county will be available to provide detailed information on specific vacancies and district compensation packages, and some districts will conduct on-the-spot interviews. Candidates for positions are encouraged to bring multiple copies of current resumes and credential documents.

Staff members at U.C. Berkeley, Cal State Hayward, Holy Names and St. Mary's will be on hand to discuss their credential programs. In addition, state credential representatives will provide information about requirements for credentials.

According to Merle Hauser, personnel director for the Contra Costa Office of Education, employment opportunities for the 1989-90 school year in the county cover a wide range of subjects, including science, mathematics, industrial arts, foreign language, computer science and physical education.

Call the County Office of Education hotline at 944-3471 for more information.

El Cerrito students Michelle Gdalia Brand and Thomas A. Tandoc took top honors at the Bay Area Science Fair Saturday in San Francisco. Both will travel with their projects to compete in the National Science Fair in Pittsburgh, Penn. this May.

Social Security requires reporting of excess income

All beneficiaries who earned over the annual limits in 1988 are required to send reports of their earnings to Social Security by April 17. The reports must show how much you earned during 1988 and how much you expect to earn in 1989.

The annual earnings limits for people 65 and over are $8,400 during 1988 and $8,880 in 1989. For people under 65, the limits are $6,120 in 1988 and $6,480 in 1989. The limits do not apply to people 70 and over the entire year.

Employees should note that the amount that must be reported for 1988 is gross earnings, the amount shown in the block labeled "Social Security Wages" on your 1988 W-2 forms. For self-employed persons, the amount that must be reported is net income after the deduction of business expenses.

You must also tell us how much you expect to make in 1989. Try to be as accurate as possible. If you do not give an estimate, we will use your 1988 earnings to decide how much we will pay in 1989.

Failure to file an annual report may require a person to pay a monetary penalty. Failure to provide an estimate of earnings for 1989 could result in an interruption of benefits.

Justy heads pack of better '89 mini-cars

Subaru's Justy GL offers revolutionary new Electronic Continuously Variable Transmission

Trying to pick the best of the crop of sub-compact mini-cars is difficult. Manufacturers are now offering some interesting models which deliver driveability character. The "little box on four wheels and look" is slowly fading in its place is a zappy, good-looking model that offers all the that a mini-car is meant to offer. Subaru's popular Justy is a perfect example of the above. It has been on the market for several years and for 1989 it has been fully revised with new suspension, body, interior and a new "driver friendly" transmission.

Auto Scene

The new body is based on a six-inch longer chassis which gives the Justy a multiple number of direct comfort and safety improvements. The added inches give the suspension a better base to work from which, in turn, provides improved braking capability, handling and ride.

The '89 Justy has lost its boxy square edges. In their place is a rounded and stylish design which gives it a "cute" contemporary look. The new body also offers many advantages. It is quieter through the air, meaning less interior noise, has larger interior space offering greater headroom front and rear, and a larger trunk. The body rigidity has been improved dramatically with new side frames, floor, "A" pillar and "C" pillar which means in simple terms that the Justy is a lot stronger.

Subaru has also added larger bumpers which give almost double the protection required by federal law.

The body on the GL also gets a little extra in the way of protection from parking lot "door knockers" with a thick wide side molding that will protect against many annoying cosmetic dings caused by the edges of other automobile doors banging into the side of the Justy in super-market parking lots.

Behind the wheel these changes are noticeable.

The Justy seems to sit better on the road and is less prone to side-wind buffeting than the '88 model.

In both commuter traffic and about town the Justy turns in a fine performance for its model range. It is an easy vehicle to drive especially with its new ECVT transmission.

Its short wheelbase and 32-foot turning diameter allow for some nippy in-town driving and parking.

The optional $580 Electronically Continuously Variable Transmission is a breakthrough on the United States domestic market while it is old hat for the Europeans.

DAF, the Dutch car maker now owned by Volvo, has been building continuously variable transmissions for years. The design offer a host of advantages for small car transmissions from few moving parts to wider powerflow characteristics to smoother up-hill operation than conventional automatic transmissions.

The ECVT transmission uses a pair of adjustable pulleys connected by a steel belt.

The pulleys sense the load and automatically adjust their ratio to match engine speed and load. The system works well and the Justy, with its electronically controlled version, is smooth and zappy to cart about town.

Surprisingly, up over the Highway 101 Waldo Grade in Marin County, the Justy toured along with the traffic, not seeming to particularly run out of wind.

This is performance plus as the Justy uses a three cylinder engine developing only 66 horsepower. The transmission has two phases, "D" for just running about and "Ds" for more snappy performance.

The combination of the ECVT transmission and its small 1.1 liter three cylinder engine returned a fuel economy figure around 35 miles to the gallon which is an excellent performance considering its automatic capabilities.

It is also an interesting point that both Ford and Fiat have agreements to purchase these transmissions from Subaru for installation in their '90s sub-compacts.

Sub-compacts are small vehicles which have a predetermined usefulness. To me this means an about-town commuter which occasionally will be called upon to haul a few hundred miles on a one day visit.

The Justy does without a second thought. But if you are considering using it to haul back and forth long distances this is not the vehicle you want. Even with all its new chassis, brake and interior work, the Justy is not a "highway flyer."

With its 90 pinch wheelbase and firm suspension, the Justy tends to jump about on broken surfaces which translates to a traditional sub-compact ride, where you feel most surface variations and are jarred by the larger ones.

About town, the new interior offers a pleasant place to be. The larger open windows offer good visibility in all directions while all of the Justy's controls are simple and well organized.

The standard AM-FM radio delivers excellent sound quality along with a good deal of long distance reception. The instrument pod and controls have been revised and upgraded along with the bucket seats which offer better support and comfort.

The doors open wide for easy access to the rear seats which offer a greater degree of comfort than the '88 model, with improved leg room for the two place rear seating. The rear seat also splits and folds down to make a large cargo space.

As much as all the new body and structural improvements have added to the Justy's quietness, the transmission still kicks up quite a whirl when pressed to deliver full tilt acceleration but on an open highway cruise the Justy delivers an interior sound level about average for the class.

The sub-compact market is full of new products these days. Trying to determine which is going to suit one's particular needs gets more difficult each week as the new '90s models break into the market place.

I certainly liked the Subaru with its new-style transmission, as did my wife who complimented it on its ease of use and snappy acceleration.

As an about-town commuter car the Justy ECVT, with its price tag running around $7,000, is certainly hard to go past.

It comes with a host of excellent standard features which present a quite complete package especially with its new age ACVT transmission and excellent fuel economy.

Paws for Advice

By Nancy Frensey

Keep your dog 'on the pill'

Paws is a pet advice column brought to you by the Berkeley East Bay Humane Society.

Send your questions to Paws, P.O. Box 222, Berkeley 94702.

I have two Doberman Pinschers. One is about 2 years old, the other, 8 years. I would like to know if they need to be on heartworm pills and what are some of the advantages and side effects. The dogs are not on the pills now.

Marie Southwick
Richmond

More and more dogs are "on the pill" these days; if they're not, they should be. Heartworms are transmitted by mosquitos and once the infected mosquitos and heartworms are in an area, we can't ignore the problem.

We now have heartworm disease in various parts of the East Bay, so your best move is to get each of your dogs tested, then start them on preventive pills if their test results are negative. A new once-a-month preventive pill is now available. I haven't seen any side effects and they are very effective in preventing heartworm disease. The advantage is that you don't have to worry about your dogs getting sick and dying of this disease.

Lisa Fromer-Valenzuela, D.V.M.

My cat, Charlie, is a terrible, obnoxious sprayer even though we had him neutered at 8 months. We are moving into a new house soon with all new carpets and drapes. Nothing we have tried stops him. He sprays like a faucet. Why does he do this? How can we stop him?

Diane Parker
El Cerrito

You have one of the toughest problems a cat person can have! You could go crazy trying to figure out why he does it. Most veterinarians and behaviorists seem to think it is brought on in neutered cats by insecurity or anxiety. If he's in a multiple cat household, he could be trying to claim territory (who can explain that response?).

In general, it's a good idea to take him in for a physical to find out if there is a physical reason such as a urinary tract infection. While you're at the vet's ask about the drug therapies, such as Valium, that some doctors have found to be successful in treating this behavior.

Bear in mind, though, that if the drugs work, he will have to take them every day of his life or the behavior will return.

Pets of the Month

Rita, left, is a 1½-year-old female shepherd mix. She was found abandoned but her finders can't keep her. She needs a one-dog household and obedience training. Calli, a 2-year-old pointer-Australian shepherd mix, became homeless when her family relocated. She is good with other pets, very sweet and has a long, long tongue.

Plants are not the only thing that interest this botanist

IN HER SOFT voice with the lovely Irish lilt, Fionnuala discussed everything from shooting genes into cells with a gun to the troubles in Northern Ireland.

Newly arrived in Albany from County Cork by way of Florida, Fionnuala Monish is now working with the U.S.D.A. Research Division of the Agriculture Field Station where she is doing experiments in plant transformation.

This is where the shooting of genes comes in. In a newly-conceived method, scientists actually shoot genes into cells of plants. Fionnuala's immediate work is to add genes which will make certain plants resistant to nonspecific herbicides, thus making the use of chemicals unnecessary.

Researchers also work on adding amino acids to plant cells to provide additional protein. Fionnuala came to the United States to do "post doc" work in her specialty. In college in Cork, Ireland, she took four years of pure science in botany and then, rather than work on her M.Sc., she skipped directly to her Ph.D.

In Ireland, students can earn a Ph.D. in three years, allowing them to finish at an earlier age. Dr. Monish was 26 when she received her doctorate.

of the Olympics, too late for Fionnuala.

SHE WON IN THE 100 meters race in the World Championship, and ranked in the mile. During this time she traveled a great deal, running many parts of the European continent.

At the same time she was working her way through college. She was a waitress, worked in a bar, and with geriatrics.

She continues her interest in the outdoors here, taking with the Sierra Club and exploring our wonderful facilities. She trekked Nepal the Sierra Club last year. "You run every day, always on your own."

"It gives me a space to think," she says. She has stopped running. "It makes in general so much easier if you are physically fit. You are mentally more alert." She remembers the wonderful feeling, when running races. "You are achieving all the time." Just running is something you do yourself.

Fionnuala has other talents. She did some ballet as a youngster, and she took elocution classes. In fact, she could have gotten a diploma in elocution. Elocution, though longer popular in this country, considered an art form in Europe where there are competitions in it. You learn about poetry and theater and helps children, allowing them speak before classes and without fright.

"MY FAMILY HAS supported me in everything I have done," Fionnuala says. They helped her train when she was running and backed her choices of education and outside activities.

"I would find it difficult to get back into competition again," she says, "with no support group behind me." She does have one brother who lives in Los Angeles. In fact, came up to help her get settled and buy a car when she came to California. And her parents came out this summer to visit with her.

Fionnuala knows that she stay in this country. There's way to use her specialty in Ireland. "Besides, I like the lifestyle here," she says. She does miss the ease with which they make friends in Ireland.

"They're very curious, and like to talk to people." Also tea breaks helped them get to know each other. There was a break at 10:30 a.m., lunch at noon, and another break in the afternoon. And a great deal of community spirit.

Fionnuala wants to go sailing and surfing and river rafting. She has already gone into canoeing in Florida. A handsome young woman with great mane of brown hair, she looks forward to making friends and a place for herself in her new home.

Always, thank you for your calls and notes. I welcome your happily. Write to 555 Powers No. 443, Albany 94706 or 525-4585.

CITY OF ALBANY

MEETING PLACE: MONDAY, April 24, 1989
TIME AND PLACE: 8:00 p.m., City Hall Council Chambers
SUBJECT: CONSIDERATION OF ZONING ORDINANCE AMENDMENTS PERTAINING TO SECONDARY DWELLING UNITS AND SIGNS IN THE COMMERCIAL DISTRICTS.

The City of Albany is considering two sets of amendments to the Zoning Ordinance. The provisions for secondary dwelling units (Section 20-310) would revise the standards for such units, and set up a classification system. Development standards for secondary dwelling units would be strengthened, and off-street parking standards would be revised to reflect the period of time when the primary dwelling unit was originally constructed.

The sign provisions for commercial districts would be amended to permit an alternative method to calculate allowable square footage for multi-tenant buildings (Section 20-5).

All persons interested in the foregoing are invited to appear before the Albany City Council on the day at the time and in the place above mentioned. If you challenge this project in court, you may be limited to raising only those issues you or someone else raised at the public hearing described in this notice, or in written correspondence delivered to the City of Albany at, or prior to, the public hearing.

If you are interested in more information about this application, please call the Albany Planning Department at 528-5760. Staff reports are usually available by 5:00 p.m. the Friday before the meeting and may be obtained from the Planning Department, Albany City Hall, 1000 San Pablo Avenue, or by calling 528-5760.

2. Applicant: City of Albany

3. Location and Description of Project: The City of Albany is proposing a series of Zoning Ordinance amendments regarding changing the provisions for secondary dwelling units and the provisions for commercial signs.
